- How far are the journeys on RMR? - Look forward to spending two or more full relaxing days onboard the Rocky Mountaineer. On Canadian routes, about 450 kilometers (280 miles) each day, all in daylight.
 - Vancouver-Kamloops 460km/285 miles
 - Kamloops-Jasper 441 km/274 miles
 - Kamloops-Banff 497 km/309 miles
 - Vancouver-Whistler 119 km/74 miles
 - Whistler-Quesnel 500 km/311 miles
 - Quesnel-Jasper 534 km/332 miles
- What is the best time to travel through the Canadian Rockies? - As all RMR journeys are so amazing, there is no better time to travel, but dependent on your interest, the months offer different options. Flora, fauna, and wildlife are all beginning to emerge in April and May, where waterways will be rushing and there's often still snow dusting on the mountain peaks. In May and June, the cruising season begins. If you're matching up a cruise with this journey, these would be great travel times. In September we start to see snow-capped peaks, and the salmon run takes place around this time, which attracts hungry bears and eagles.
- How can family & friend contact me in case of an emergency - Friends and family who need to get in contact with you in case of an emergency, should call our Guest Experience Centre at guestexperience@rockymountaineer.com or at the following phone numbers:

- Should clients buy Travel Insurance - Although not a requirement to enter Canada or the US, it is strongly recommended that whenever you travel outside your country of residence to have adequate medical and trip interruption insurance. Travel insurance not only protects you in the event of a medical emergency, but most insurance providers also offer practical assistance in the event of emergency travel plans such as booking last minute flights and hotels, delayed or lost luggage tracking assistance and of course peace of mind. Whether purchased directly through Rocky Mountaineer or with another travel professional, travel insurance is always a wise decision.
- What happens if the journey is interrupted by wildfires? - As the safety of our guests and crews is our top priority, we constantly monitor the wildfire situation in our areas of operation to evaluate any potential impact on our operations. Should wildfires occur near our routes and affect our operations, we will share relevant information at www.rockymountaineer.com. If you would like to discuss your upcoming journey, please contact our sales center.
